This course will provide students with a deeper understanding of the Design Thinking model and how to use it in the work of coaching and human services. It will review key components of Design Thinking theory and related skills to apply in working with clients. Through the series, participants will dive deeply into the “Designing Your Life” tools such as reframing, using meters as measures, odyssey planning and prototype ideation.

Time will be spent practicing the application of these skills and getting real-time feedback on how to grow as a coach, and as an expert using coaching. There will be an opportunity to discuss ongoing support and resources.

The course will be taught by Kelly Davis Martin, a Wellcoaches Faculty and Mentor, who also is a certified Designing Your Life Coach. She helped to bring Design Thinking into the Wellcoaches curriculum. Kelly is a Professional Certified Coach with the ICF, a Board Certified Coach and a National Board Credentialed Health and Wellness Coach. She has a Masters in Public Health and is completing her Doctorate in Behavioral Health.
